ABOUT SAKYADHITA

Sakyadhita, "Daughters of the Buddha," is the world's leading international organization of Buddhist women. It is an alliance of women (and men) committed to transforming the lives of Buddhist women. This international alliance was founded at the conclusion of the first International Conference on Buddhist Women, held in Bodhgaya, India, in 1987.

Sakyadhita seeks to unite Buddhist women of diverse countries and traditions, to promote their welfare and to facilitate their work for the benefit of humanity.

Since 1987 conferences have been held every two years, most recently, at the end of 2009, in Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam, for the 11th Sakyadhita International Conference where more than 2400 nuns, laywomen and men were in attendance.

Sakyadhita International Conferences have been held in Thailand, Sri Lanka, Ladakh, Cambodia, Nepal, Taiwan, Korea, Malaysia, Mongolia and Vietnam. Laywomen, nuns, laymen, and monks from almost 40 countries all over the world have attended these conferences. The 12th Sakyadhita International Conference will be held in Bangkok, Thailand, in June 2011.

Sakyadhita branches and chapters have been established in 12 countries: Canada, France, Germany, India, Ladakh, Nepal, Sri Lanka, Singapore, Taiwan, Thailand, the U.K. The newest branch is Sakyadhita USA.

Members of Sakyadhita cooperate to help women develop their potential as scholars, practitioners, teachers, counselors, artists, community organizers, and compassionate social activists.

SAKYADHITA USA (SUSA)

Sakyadhita USA was established as a national branch of Sakyadhita International in June 2010. SUSA is made up of committed Buddhist laywomen and monastics/nuns who reside in the U.S. and are focussed on the needs and concerns of Buddhist women living in the U.S.

Beginning in 2012, SUSA will organize a bi-annual North American Buddhist Women's Conference that will include Sakyadhita Canada and dharma sisters in Mexico. These conferences will address the particular concerns of Buddhist women in North America, across all traditions and ethnicities. This ongoing effort will require a large number of volunteers and great fundraising effort.

For the present, please join us in working toward Sakyadhita's objectives for Buddhist women in the United States. Sign up to receive email updates about Sakyadhita USA events and projects by joining the emailing list using the attached form or by signing up on the Sakyadhita USA website at: <http://www.sakyadhita.org/usa>
